U.N. Commission's Unique Plan For Palestine

Lake Success, Sept. 13.—The U.N. Palestine Conciliation Commission tonight put forward a unique plan for permanent internationalisation of the Jerusalem area under the United Nations, with considerable local autonomy in separate Arab and Jewish zones.

The blueprint for the Holy City will be considered by the General Assembly session opening next Tuesday. It provides for ultimate United Nations control through a commissioner and a three-man high court to be picked by the Assembly. Natives of Israel, all Arab states and the two zones of Jerusalem would be ineligible for these key posts.

GO SLOW BY LONDON RAIL MEN

London, Sept. 13.—A "go slow" movement involving 100,000 railwaymen in the London area may paralyse railways and London transport from Wednesday next week following the recommendations adopted tonight by the London leaders of the Railwaymen's Union.

The London District Council of the National Union of Railwaymen decided tonight to summon a meeting of London's 50,000 railway workers for Monday.

They will have before them a recommendation from the District Council that a "work to rule" (go slow) policy be introduced within 48 hours—at midnight on Wednesday next week.

The proposed go-slow movement is in protest against the rejection of the men's claim for higher wages.

The District Council decided to invite other union branches in the counties surrounding London to join the mass meeting on Monday. If they accept, and if the meeting endorses the decision of the London leaders, it was thought that 100,000 men would be involved.

Members of the London district branches are the men responsible for the functioning of London's vast underground railway system as well as the main-line terminals of the capital.—Reuter.

Day to day business of the municipal government would be in the hands of local zonal authorities, and a joint 16-man municipal council that would try to co-ordinate city-wide public services. The commissioner would be empowered to ensure the protection of holy places, demilitarisation of the area and protection of human rights "as set forth in the universal Declaration of Human Rights."

The area covered by the international statute would include the "town of Jerusalem together with surrounding villages and towns," including Bethlehem to the south and Elia Karim to the west. The plan makes no effort to draw the final borders of the "Jerusalem area" or final demarcation line between the proposed Jewish and Arab zones.

The U.N. Commission said it believed that the plan is flexible enough to fit in with any final Holy Land settlement and, meanwhile, an international regime could be based on the present armistice lines.

500 POLICEMEN

The plan provides permanent demilitarisation and neutralisation of the area, allowing a maximum of 500 police in each zone—armed with normal police weapons—to maintain law and order.

The commissioner, who would be appointed for a five-year term, would be authorised to employ guards for securing protection and free access to holy places and provide security for himself and his staff.

Other provisions of the plan include:

1. The appointment of a deputy commissioner to assist

Devaluation Urged By World Bank President

Washington, Sept. 13.—The dual meeting of the World Bank and the International Monetary Fund got off to an explosive start today with a round of thinly veiled attacks on British Socialism and American gold policies. At the same time, economic experts of 48 nations who gathered here for the meeting were warned bluntly that many of their currencies will have to be devalued to get world trade back on an even keel.

Eugene Black, Wall Street financier and President of the World Bank, spoke up for the devaluation scheme, and followed it up with an obvious slap at Britain's socialisation measures. Black said pointedly that many countries have undertaken "extensive" social welfare programmes since the end of the war without adequate means to support them.

He said: "Unfortunately it has become apparent that many countries cannot now afford ambitious programmes of social services without either cutting their living standards in other respects or cutting back their productive investments."

Black also suggested that the United States change some of its own policies. He recommended a revision of American tariffs and other trade restrictions and warned against using the Marshall Plan to dump surpluses abroad. In addition, he said the United States should not encourage the production of goods here which can be imported more cheaply.

POLICIES ATTACKED

Criticism of American gold policies came from N. C. Havenga, Finance Minister of the Union of South Africa. Without referring to the United States by name, he said that the International Fund would become an "instrument" of some members if it failed to raise the gold price from its present level of US$35 an ounce.

South Africa is the world's leading gold producer. The United States is about the only buyer of the metal.

Havenga submitted a resolution proposing that any country be permitted to sell half of its newly mined gold to the United States at the pegged price and half "in any market at such premium prices as may be the ruling in that market."

Havenga said: "I do not think that the disruptive effects of the present position can be endured much longer."

He told monetary experts that gold-producing nations would not have joined the International Fund if they had not been given to understand that it would bring about a rise in gold prices. He said the Fund should fall in honouring its obligations in terms of this plain intention it ceases to be an "instrument of international co-operation dealing fairly with all of its members."

MILD STIR

Czechoslovakia's delegate, Pavel Elster, created a mild stir by accusing certain unnamed nations of trying to use economic "blackmail" on his country during the past year. He demanded that the currency devaluation discussions be conducted publicly, but when his proposal was put to the vote, it was defeated by 40-2, with only the Polish delegate backing him.

The devaluation scheme was dumped into the delegates' laps by executive directors of the Monetary Fund via their annual report and was backed up by Black and other speakers.

President Truman, speaking to the delegates, emphasised: "We must eliminate obstacles to international trade and exchange both goods and services on a world basis. The Government of the United States, through its President and Congress, is doing everything possible to make the United Nations a going concern for the sake of peace and the welfare of the world."

He said that the delegates will reach constructive conclusions and he is confident that they will.

Mr. Truman spoke extemporaneously for four minutes as the delegates ended their public sessions and prepared to break up into working committees. The committee on revaluation of currencies met almost immediately. The session, which President Truman attended, was opened by the French Finance Minister, Maurice Petech, who paid tribute to him for sponsoring his "Point Four" programme to help under-developed areas of the world.—United Press.

JOCKEY GIVES EVIDENCE IN BIG EXCHANGE CLAIM

Mr Hugh Maitland, well-known jockey, entered the witness box at the Supreme Court this morning to testify when hearing was resumed before Mr Justice Williams of the nine-lakh Shanghai foreign exchange transactions case, in which the plaintiff is A. V. White, of 3, College Road, Kowloon, and defendant is F. C. Roberts, of 96, Robinson Road.

Plaintiff is represented by the Hon. Leo d'Almada, KC, and Mr D. A. L. Wright, instructed by Mr M. A. da Silva, while Roberts is represented by Mr H. G. Sheldon, KC, and Mr A. J. Clifford, on the instructions of Sir Man-kam Lo.

Maitland said he had known White for 25 years and Roberts for 10. The first occasion he met Roberts in connection with foreign exchange business was in his (Roberts') office at the end of February or beginning of March 1947. Witness was quoted publicly, but when his proposal was put to the vote, it was defeated by 40-2, with only the Polish delegate backing him.

The devaluation scheme was dumped into the delegates' laps by executive directors of the Monetary Fund via their annual report and was backed up by Black and other speakers.

PROFITS SHARED

Replying to Mr. Wright, Maitland said that it was a common thing for brokers in Shanghai to have direct phone lines, the reason for this being that the service was not particularly good at that time and it was very necessary in this type of business to have speedy communication.

Continuing, witness said that they put through a considerable number of transactions with Roberts and Baeten, but not under any particular firm name. Witness was not a partner of White but worked on a profit-sharing basis. He "heard" in March 1948 that Baeten and Roberts had incorporated a firm

Bevin & Acheson To Decide Policy On Chinese Reds

RECOGNITION ISSUE UNDER DISCUSSION

London, Sept. 13.—The timing of recognition of the Chinese Communist regime is expected to be one of the important policy decisions to be taken by the British Foreign Secretary, Mr Ernest Bevin, and the United States Secretary of State, Mr Dean Acheson, before Saturday, the date of the first meeting of the Atlantic Pact Council.

ONE KILLED, TWO INJURED ON TRIUMPH

One naval rating was killed and two seriously injured in an accident to an aircraft on the flight deck of the aircraft carrier HMS Triumph yesterday afternoon.

The carrier was on exercises southeast of Hongkong at the time of the accident. She returned to the Colony immediately and the two injured men were taken to the Royal Naval Hospital where they were this morning stated to be dangerously ill.

The dead man will be buried with full naval honours at Happy Valley at 2.30 this afternoon.

The names of the victims of the accident will not be released by the local naval authorities until the next of kin have been informed.

Yacht Stolen From Dieppe

Dieppe, Sept. 13.—The Dieppe Port authorities have issued a notice to foreign ports and to ships at sea, especially in the Channel area, to watch for a small yacht, the Mushka, which left Dieppe Harbour on Friday. A Belgian couple, Mr and Mrs Boel, the owners of the yacht, told the Dieppe police that the Mushka sailed without their consent. They added that in the yacht was a large sum of money and some jewellery.

Other decisions are expected to concern policy in Germany and the Balkans as well as the Far East.

Diplomatic observers in London now believe that the Chinese Communists may force the issue of recognition on the rest of the world within the next few weeks.

Obviously, no question of recognition arises so long as the Chinese Communists have not set up a formal government.

But continued military successes for the Chinese Communists suggest that this step is likely to be taken either with the fall of Canton or in celebration of the national festival on October 10.

BURNING QUESTION

As soon as there is a Chinese Communist government in existence, diplomatic questions in the Far East that it will be recognised by the Soviet Union. Consequently, the question of recognition by the Western Powers will become a burning one.

At the same time, officials here emphasise the supreme importance of Britain and the United States taking the same line on this question.

In usually well-informed quarters here, it is believed that the British Government favours a frank realist view of the Chinese situation, and would support prompt de jure recognition of a Communist government on the ground that the Communist regime is already in control of the greater part of China.

In coming to this conclusion, the British Government is known to have been in constant touch with the other Commonwealth Governments.

RADICAL SOLUTION

The Indian Government, in particular, is believed here to favour a radical solution of the question of relations with China involving recognition of the Communist regime at the earliest opportunity.

It is thought here that policy in Washington has not yet crystallised to the same extent.

Internal political considerations, including the possibility that recognition of the Communists might be the signal for a frontal attack on the administration by the Republican Party, are thought here to be an important factor in the attitude of the United States.

Despite this, it remains possible that all governments will have to face the issue of relations with China during the current session of the United Nations General Assembly.

If no Chinese Communist government is proclaimed until after the present session is over, the existing Chinese delegation to the United Nations can continue to function for the term of the next Assembly.

AWKWARD PROBLEM

But the proclamation of a Communist government next month would face members of the United Nations with an awkward problem of legitimacy. There is also a body of expert opinion which holds that without valid Chinese representation the Security Council could not function.

It is to provide against the contingency of a crisis in Chinese representation at the United Nations that Mr Bevin and Mr Acheson are obliged to take up a good deal of their current four days' policy talks in deciding what to do.

Unless an almost simultaneous recognition of a new Chinese government is decided on by all the Great Powers, it is difficult to see how in the not far distant future a crisis in the functioning of the Security Council can be avoided.—Reuter.

HONGKONG DEFENCE

Washington, Sept. 13.—The Bevin-Acheson talks will cover the whole field of British and American foreign policy. They will include discussion on arrangements for the defence of Hongkong. It was stated in authoritative circles today.

Mr Bevin is not expected to ask for American aid in the defence of Hong Kong. (Continued on Page 5)

Big Typhoon Approaching East Formosa

A severe typhoon, with winds of 90 knots at the centre, is approaching the east coast of Formosa. It is extremely unlikely to affect Hongkong, an official of the Royal Observatory stated this morning.

A ship close to the centre at 5 a.m. today reported winds of 90 knots. The position then was latitude 25° N, longitude 123° E. A United Press message from Manila stated that the typhoon, north of the Philippines, was expected to be 200 miles north-east of Batavia, in the Sulu Islands, this morning. The Manila Weather Bureau also said that the typhoon was expected to move WNW at 11 miles an hour. It added that 90-mph winds were expected near the centre and winds of 88 mph or more within a radius of 100 miles from the centre.

Concession For Troops

WITH the exception of a few small units, the present programme of reinforcing Hongkong has been completed. Within four months the garrison has been increased from one to four infantry brigades, with supporting artillery and armour, and the Colony's naval and air defences have been considerably strengthened. In view of the distances the reinforcements have had to travel, British commitments in other parts of the world, and the difficulty of fitting so many men into such a small and overcrowded station, the service authorities can be congratulated on their achievement. It is possible, of course, that future events may demand a further strengthening of Hongkong's defences, but the British Government has acted with praiseworthy speed and on a big enough scale to protect the Colony from foreseeable dangers. From the troops' point of view, their arrival in Hongkong—for most of them their first taste of foreign service—has probably been a disappointment and an anti-climax. Crowded into hurriedly erected camps—considerably less comfortable than the barracks from which most of them have come—they see a Colony apparently little disturbed by the threat which has brought them half-way across the world. There are bound to be grumbles. The service authorities, realising the importance of morale, have made an attempt to explain to the troops the real need for their presence here. This is an intelligent policy. On their part, a number of civilian organisations and individuals are working to make the men's stay as pleasant as it can be. The servicemen's chief objection to life in Hongkong is sure to be the high cost of living. Individual civilians, similarly afflicted, can do little about this, though servicemen have a few concessions—notably reduced rates at cinemas, and on the ferries and buses. On a larger scale, Government can play its part by removing the import duty now paid on the services' beer and cigarettes. At present the troops pay $1.70 in the NAAFI for a quart bottle of English beer. Of this, 25 cents is duty and is common to civilian and services' imports. This price is a good deal cheaper than that paid by civilians in hotels and clubs, but it is a large item for the serviceman, with his meagre few dollars a day. The serviceman pays the same price as the civilian for his cigarettes—90 cents for a packet of 20—of which 22 cents is duty. This is much cheaper than he can buy cigarettes at home, but the high cost of living in Hongkong more than neutralises the benefit. Any revenue collected by Government from this source is extra income; the presence of so many troops was not visualised at the time of the last budget, and the loss involved by abolition of the duty would not be a real one. Ample precedent exists. The services were allowed duty-free cigarettes and beer in Hongkong until February, 1947. In Singapore they have no duty to pay on beer. In Ceylon—at least until a few months ago—there is no duty at all. The sums involved might seem trivial, but there can be no intention to profit from these men. This duty should be abolished, immediately—if only as a gesture to show the troops that their presence here is welcomed, and that their difficulties are viewed with sympathy.

TV AND THE TWINS GO INTO THE GLAMOUR BUSINESS

Rita will show the mistakes of her sister

By Mark Johns

TWENTY-THREE-YEAR-OLD sisters Irene and Rita Day were picked from 17 sets of identical twins to show television viewers in England how to wear clothes.

The 34 girls paraded for a voice and camera test. Twelve sets of twins were eliminated in the first heat, and the remaining ten paraded again—this time in borrowed swim suits.

The winners will appear in "Picture Pugs" programme, and they begin rehearsals soon for the "Your Wardrobe" series.

For this Irene and Rita will be dressed as Miss Right and Miss Wrong. Fashion expert Betty Spurling will point out the mistakes.

Petite and brunette, the twins live at Westcliff-on-Sea. Rita is married; Irene is a civil servant.

Chinese Influence In Fur Style

Toronto. Fur coats ranging in length from 12 inches from ground (about 12 inches from ground) were shown in Toronto recently. Mr. Creed predicted greater popularity for the three-quarter length coat this season, but thought the full length would be the stronger seller.

Kick Pleat

Back fullness in coats is interpreted by the "kick" back in many cases rather than the ripple back. This brought the fullness to the side back rather than to the centre and created a wide box pleat effect.

Chinese influence is noted in a number of coats with side slits, Mandarin collar and kimono sleeves. Pockets are interesting, being of the large patch type or worked into the hip line.

Interpretation Of Dior

In a half blood mink, is Creed's interpretation of the Dior collar with looped ascot. Again the Dior influence appeared in funnel-like breast pockets in a gray Persian lamb coat.

A beaver coat is shown in a dark blue with scarcely any of the light part ordinarily seen in beaver, and without grooves. A three-quarter length coat, it has a collar and large patch pockets.

A black broadtail full length coat with kimono sleeves, gathered waistline and Queen Anne collar gathered in the same way proved another highlight.

Between-Season Choice

When one hundred baby sitters, including girls, boys and adults, were asked what the first thing is they would want in a baby sitter if they were parents, the following replies were most often given:

Love and understanding of children.

Kindness.

A person who liked children.

To have patience and be kind.

Interest in the welfare of the children.

That she loved children enough to make them happy.

To be kind and understanding.

By GRACE THORNCLIFFE

CAFE AU LAIT crepe is the fabric selected for a simple but elegant little afternoon frock, a nice between-season choice and right at home when the new season gets under way. It has a high round neckline—a change from the plunge jobs—and is practically seamless below the fitted capote. The bodice is neatly moulded and the skirt conceals its fared folds in the centre front and back. Matching belt. The cape is detachable, making it a good basic dress line on its own and a nice background for dress-up accessories.

YOUR SLIP IS SHOWING... TEN TIMES OVER

Irene and Rita posed for this Right and Wrong photograph to show the kind of dress mistakes that some girls might make. Irene is wrong (left). Rita is right (right).

1. HAT is too dressy, has unnecessary veiling and too large a flower.
2. DROP EARRINGS are wrong with this dress.
3. NECKLACE, choker type, is too large.
4. CLIP is too big, doesn't go with an afternoon dress.
5. MITTENS, in pink net, are unsuitable.
6. BRACELETS, four of them, are unwanted.
7. BAG would be right for the beach, but not for a walk in town.
8. HEMLINE is too high.
9. STANCE—awkward.
10. ANKLESTRAPS—too many of them.

Penicillin Shouldn't Be Used For Mild Infection

By H. N. BUNDESEN, M.D.

EXPERIENCE has shown that a number of people easily become sensitive or allergic to penicillin. Though they can take it once or twice without reactions, later doses may cause effects in the form of skin rashes or generalised sickness.

Thus, it is a mistake to use penicillin for any and every mild infection which comes along. The person who becomes sensitised by penicillin by taking it for conditions which could be well handled in some other way may deprive himself of its use in a severe infection when it will be greatly needed, and that is why we always say do not take medicine unless your doctor prescribes it. And it is important, as a general rule, never to use penicillin in a hit or miss fashion, but to reserve it always for treatment of conditions in which it is known that the germs causing the trouble are sensitive to it—that is, the penicillin will check their growth.

Sample Test

If it is suspected that a patient is sensitive to penicillin before it is employed, a sample test, called a patch test, should be made. This is carried out by placing the penicillin preparation on a small piece of gauze which is fastened to the skin for a 24-hour period. If the person is sensitive to the penicillin, a red area will appear where it is in contact with the skin.

It has been noted that persons who have had fungus infections, such as ringworm, are more likely than others to become sensitive to penicillin. Penicillin should not be used on the skin for longer than five to seven days, and its use should be stopped at the first signs of any reaction.

If a person is known to be sensitive to penicillin, it may be possible to decrease this sensitivity by giving gradually increased doses.

Should Be Stopped

When reaction occurs, it should be stopped at once unless there is some critical need for it. This is especially necessary in cases of skin eruptions. So-called anti-histamine drugs may be used to eliminate the reaction symptoms. It is suggested that one of them, known

Lighten The Job On Washday

By ELEANOR ROSS

THE everyday tasks of the housewife, no matter how speedily and efficiently, are made more pleasant and less of a burden when the various mechanical aids so many of us still flounder when it comes to such tasks as the weekly wash.

Things should be sorted according to the amount of soil, colour fastness and type of fabric or construction, if the job is to be a thorough yet easy one. The typical groups are: (1) white and predominantly white things; (2) heavily soiled work or play clothes; (3) coloured cottons; (4) rayon slips, gowns, pyjamas, children's sheer pinafores, fancy linens, etc. If these classifications are generally followed, the first essential of careful sorting will have been followed.

Water Temperature

As for water temperature, for the white, predominantly white and coloured cottons, water should be 140 F. or hotter, never less than 125 F. Use a thermometer or make a quick hand-check. Water of about 125 F. is the hottest the hand can tolerate; consequently, water too hot for the hand is bound to come within the correct temperature. Unless colours are guaranteed fast they need the protection of lukewarm water to prevent fading; the same temperature recommended for fine fabrics such as silks and woolsens which are frequently washed by hand. Lukewarm water (100 to 105 F.) feels comfortably warm to the hand. As for rinsing, two rinses in cool water (save your hot water for washing) with wringing between rinses, is recommended.

The same rinse water should not be used for more than two or three loads. Use a good washing powder, soap or detergent, of which there are several new and improved versions on the market. The main thing is to have plenty of suds.

Washing Time

As to how much washing time for each group, much depends on the type of machine used and the degree of soil. It is wise to follow specific directions which usually come with the machine. Time generally varies from 10 to 15 min. However, washing (or agitation) time for woolsens should not exceed from 3 to 5 minutes, since excessive agitation causes woolsens to mat or shrink.

These are all simple tips but if faithfully followed they help to simplify and ease one of the most important tasks of the household.

Give Your Neck Special Care

To make sure your neck gets thoroughly clean, pin up your hair and, taking a sponge that's been dipped in soapy water, scrub it well.

By HELEN FOLLETT

IN THE good summer time the neck may undergo changes that are not for the better. Sunburn, earlier in the season, may have taken a toll, causing the skin to look dusky, if not downright leathery. If beauty seekers would be thoughtful enough to include the neck when creaming the complexion, it would not carry defects of texture and colouring.

So remember that when, during your bed-time beautifying half hour, you are slathering your countenance with a fragrant emollient. Begin at the collar bones, then you can't possibly skip your neck. Anoint your fingers, smooth up and down. Go all the way around. Pin up your hair at the back of your neck so it will not pick up any of the cream.

The short, fat neck is likely to take on necklines, creases, in special need of creaming and massaging so that affliction will not appear. Throw the head backward, massage up to the chin, then from chin to earlobes. If the colour of the neck is darker than that of the face, which happens to even the most ardent good-looking seeker, have the flesh once a day with a mild bleach. One can be compounded by combining equal portions of strained lemon juice and peroxide. Open a fresh bottle of the peroxide; this liquid is never quite as effective if the bottle has been opened for some time.

A good rule is: cream and massage for six nights, use the lotion on the seventh. Flabby flesh and fiddle strings call for exercise. Sit tall, clasp the hands at the back of the neck, move the head from side to side, keeping the clasped hands firmly pressed against the flesh so there is a muscle pull.

"MADAME, what is all this that I hear about the interesting foreign foods that are being served at the Hotel Vanderbilt in New York City?" asked the Chef.

"Simply that a number of persons connected with the United Nations are stopping there, and the Vanderbilt, like a good hotel, is providing people of such nationalities with some of their favourite native foods."

"I would like very much to visit the Hotel Vanderbilt and meet the Chef and see what he is cooking to please the United Nations."

Specially-Cooked Food

The next time we went to New York we had dinner in the cool, spacious Palm Room of the Vanderbilt. He not only gave us the most popular of the international recipes, but actually cooked the food for us. We have combined several of the dishes into a menu, and you will find the recipes for them in today's column.

One of the most interesting was Dampier bread, which is a favourite of the Australian delegation. It was a long white loaf, made with self-rising flour, and had a pleasant moist texture. This bread was unique because it contained no shortening, and yet was tender and had a fine crust.

The favourite soup of the French delegation was an excellent bouillabaisse or fish stew which is served every Friday. Chicken curry is cooked often for members of the Indian delegation, and the Egyptians always enjoy their favourite desert which is called "trifle". We will give you these recipes soon.

The Film's Kiss Problem—Leave It To The Audience!

By PATRICIA CLARY

HOLLYWOOD. The kiss-or-not-to-kiss controversy often has been resolved in the past by the picture's budget. You can't get by without a half dozen kisses in high-budget, million-dollar westerns starring Gregory Peck, Gary Cooper or Robert Taylor.

But in the lower-budget westerns, like the ones starring Gene Autry and Roy Rogers, kissing is strictly taboo. Their producers are so scared of romance that when Rogers married his leading lady they tried to throw her out of the pictures.

"The high-budget pictures play in the big city first-run theatres," Holt explained. "The low-budget ones play in the small towns and neighbourhood kid matinees. They don't go for love-stuff."

Both Endings

Consequently, Holt could, if he wanted to, release his picture with both endings—the love one for the cities and the other for the sticks. Or maybe a theatre could buy both versions. Then he could put the kisses version on for the Saturday matinees and the kissing one on at night—United Press.

Two Audiences

"We're planning to find two preview audiences who are as alike as we can make them—same number of kids in the theatre, same economic status and so on," he said. "We'll show one group the picture with the kiss and the other group the picture without."

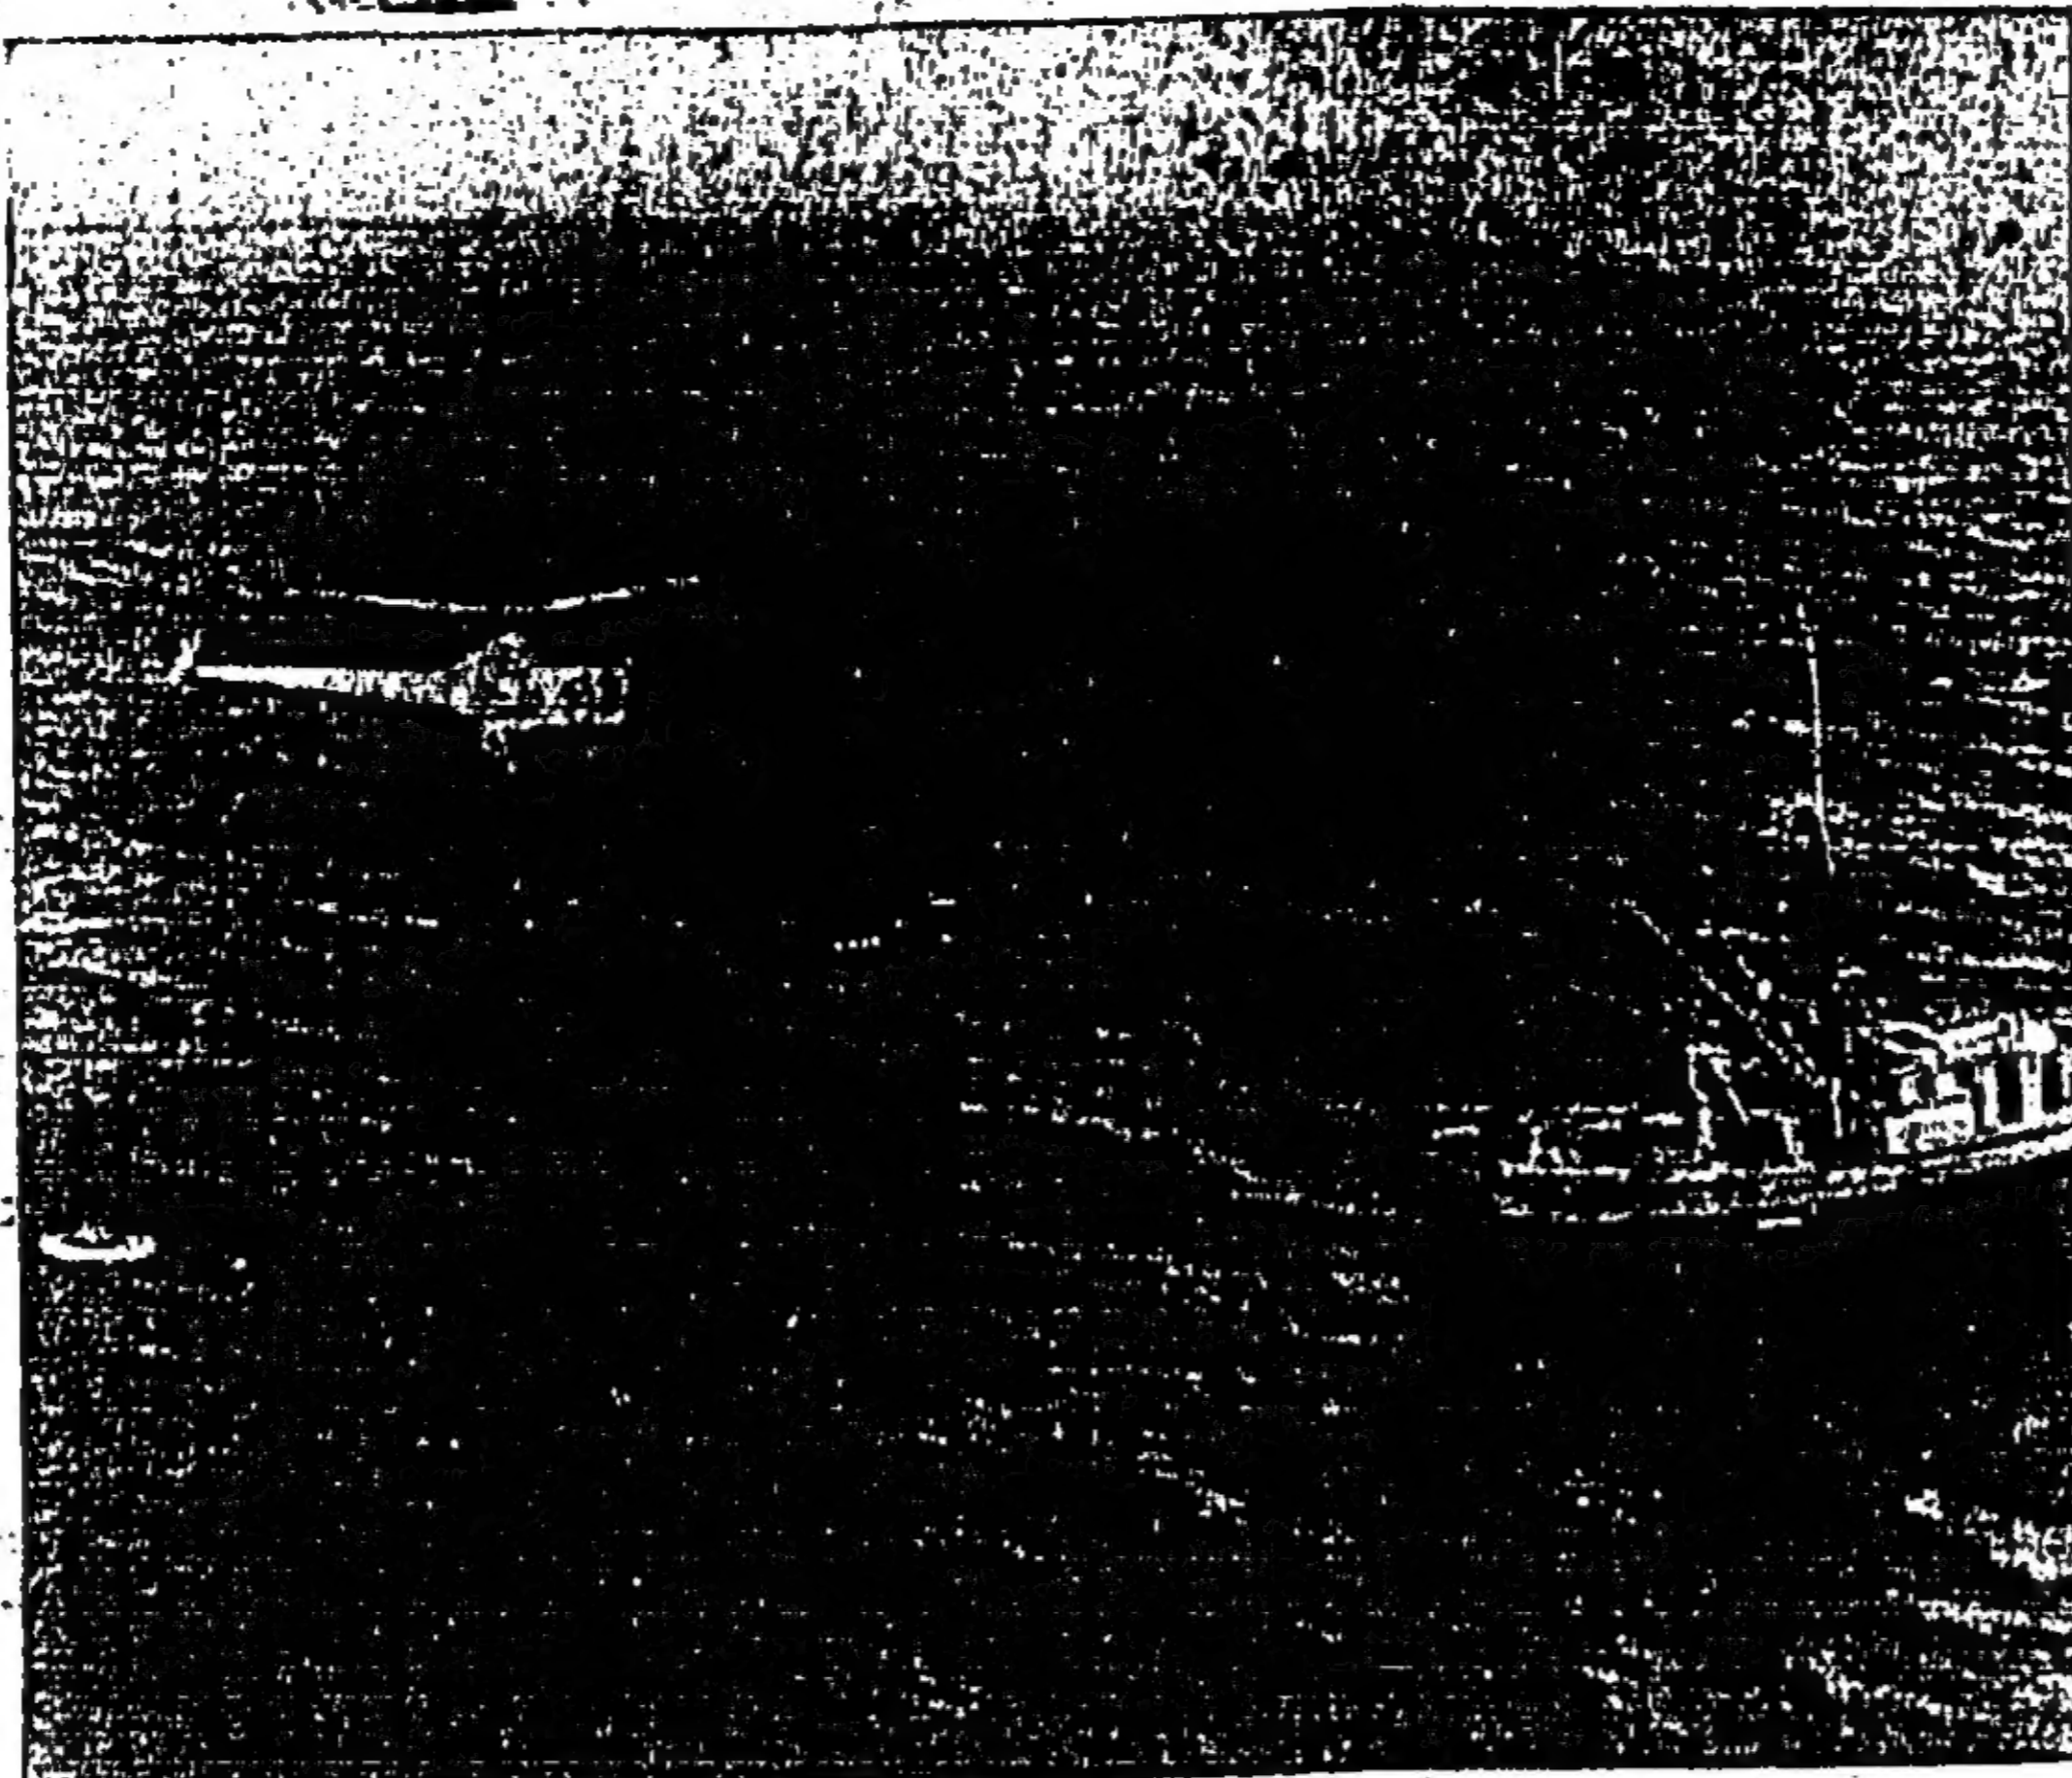

"Then we hope from the responses we get we'll be able to decide whether western audiences object to kissing."

In one ending of the picture Randolph Scott plants a solid buss on Jane Night. In the other, he just looks at her in a manner intended to imply that something may come of it after all.

PICTORIAL NEWSFRONT

BARGAINS FOR EVERYONE—Housewives in Berlin, Germany, crowded into department stores by the thousands for the first end-of-summer sale since the beginning of the war. It was a gala event and the counters were quickly emptied.

TO THE RESCUE—A helicopter from Floyd Bennett Field rushes to the rescue of a crewman suffering from a fracture on his trawler 32 miles off the New Jersey coast. The plane dropped a rubber boat, left, and the injured man was lowered to the sea, picked up and flown to Marine Hospital.

THIS IS DIFFERENT!—These girls, in a beauty contest at Fallisades Park, New Jersey, competed the hard way. They poked their heads through holes in a screen and the jury chose the one with the prettiest hair. The girls' other attractions remained concealed.

EMERGENCY IN HAMBURG—A man and boy test equipment of new kiosks in Hamburg, Germany, which contain stretchers, first aid kits, fire alarms, phones, clocks, mirrors.

A COMPLETE CHANGE—What would have taken a single farmer and a horse five years to do took the United States Agriculture Department's Soil Conservation Service just seven hours. The Hadala farm, near Adams, Massachusetts, was chosen as "typical," and 257 acres of rocky farmland were transformed into a model of soil conservation. The feat was demonstrated to some 6,000 Berkshire County farmers.

HEAT WAVE—Though it's hard to believe by observing Barry O'Neill who is surveying property lines at Keno Hill, Yukon Territory, the Alaskan mining country is suffering from a heat wave of 90 degrees. The snowballs are all right for play, but the gun is protection against half-ton bears.

BRIDE AND GROOM—Captain Richard F. Borner, 84, is swinging his 56-year-old bride to jukebox music in his son's cafe in Memphis, Tennessee. The couple eloped to Hernando, Mississippi, but they're kicking up their heels in true live fashion to celebrate.

FOR DENMARK—This is a general view of a shipyard in Tamano, Japan, where three deadweight cargo ships, each weighing 5,170 tons, are under construction for a Danish shipping firm. The first of the three to be launched is at the right background, the second is in foreground.

What will happen on Sept. 18?

by BERNARD HARRIS

LONDON.

IN London and New York the financial soothsayers prophesy that September 18 will be the day for really big news.

They say that if the Americans insist on currency adjustments as the price of further dollar aid to Europe then September 18 will be the day on which the world will learn that the pound sterling, together with a few other European currencies, has been officially devalued.

Why do they pick September 18? First, it is a Sunday. And the one day of the week when all the world's markets are shut is obviously the best to choose for such a momentous announcement.

It was on a Sunday—September 20, 1931—that Britain went off the gold standard.

But the really compelling reason for the choice of September 18 is that it marks the end of the four-day annual meetings of the World Bank and the International Monetary Fund in Washington.

And it is to the Monetary Fund that Britain had to go for permission to change the value of the pound.

For in the curious set-up of this post-war world we are no longer masters in our own house so far as our own currency is concerned. The Fund is dominated by the US but nearly 50 countries, including such financial pigmies as Costa Rica and Ethiopia, are entitled to a say in how we manage our money affairs.

Some American authorities are so convinced that a general reshuffling of currency values will be agreed that they are even prepared to forecast individual changes. One authority predicts that the pound will be cut in value by 20 percent, which would make it worth $3.22 instead of the present $4.03.

How could that be achieved? If the pound were allowed to find its own level it would eventually reach a point at which other countries would decide that it was attractive again.

A SWIFT RECOVERY

WHEN it reached that point it would become again a currency in which trade could be done.

The French franc, according to this source, is to be reduced by 17 percent, the Swedish crown by 14 percent, and the Italian lira by 9 percent.

On the argument that their economies are closely linked with ours, Norway, Holland, and Denmark are thought likely to follow us with a 20 percent cut. And presumably most of the Sterling Area would follow our lead.

Now my view is that if these American forecasts of what is to happen are near the mark it will be a black day for us. Events have shown that we made a blunder of the first order when, under the rules of the Monetary Fund, we tied the pound to the dollar at the fixed rate of 4.03.

The blunder was in seeking to achieve fixity in a chaotic world. But the world is still in a mess. What sort of guarantee have we that we shall fare better with the pound at $3.22, or indeed, at any other fixed rate than we did with it at $4.03?

The new rate of $3.22 may be too high or too low. It is guesswork of the worst sort.

FOOLISH POLICY

WHAT, then, is the alternative? Clearly, it is to set the pound free to find its own level. A natural, fluctuating rate based on supply and demand, is the only real remedy for the financial ills that beset us.

With the pound freed, we should be able to disentangle ourselves from the dollar shortage, which is the root of most of our troubles. We helped to create that shortage by tying ourselves too closely to the dollar, and we continue to sustain it so long as we keep to that foolish policy.

Our chief trouble is that too many nations are not eager to trade for sterling. We have encouraged them in that by involving ourselves in the dollar scramble.

The way back to financial health is to get the pound accepted more and more widely as a trading currency.

How could that be achieved? If the pound were allowed to find its own level it would eventually reach a point at which other countries would decide that it was attractive again.

A SWIFT RECOVERY

WHEN it reached that point it would become again a currency in which trade could be done.

It might be that momentarily the pound would fall as low as $2.50 in value.

But if we handled our affairs aright there would be a swift recovery. We should soon be able to look the dollar in the face without being tied to it.

Then, and then only, would we know that we were really pulling out of our troubles.

Why, then, do we not let the pound go free?

First, Sir Stafford Cripps and his colleagues are against it. It conflicts with the Socialist policy of controls.

Second, our hands are tied by one of those evil legacies from Bretton Woods—the rules of the International Monetary Fund.

DESIGNED TO CURE TROUBLES

IT was at an international conference at Bretton Woods—a New Hampshire, US resort—that the idea of the World Bank and Monetary Fund germinated in the summer of 1944.

These twin institutions were designed to cure the currency troubles of the post-war world. The Bank, with millions of money contributed by its 47 member countries, was to make loans for reconstruction.

—(London Express Service)

The Fund, with still more millions, was to promote exchange stability by selling foreign currency to any country temporarily short of another member's money.

A country wanting to make a substantial change in the value of its currency would first have to get the Fund's agreement. Neither of the twins has been a success.

A WHITE ELEPHANT

THE Bank has lent less than £200 million, though the resources available to it are more than £2,000 million. And the Fund, which has roughly similar resources, has lent only a fraction of the intended scale.

It has failed because its machinery won't work smoothly and its services are too costly for most of the member countries.

The Fund, in fact, has been described as a "financial white elephant."

In the view of many experts it should be better if we withdrew from this international talking-shop and regained control over our monetary affairs.

C.V.R. Thompson Reports The American Scene

NEW YORK.

AMERICAN tourists applying for passports to visit Europe are to be given a brief course in how to answer criticism, Communist and otherwise, of the Marshall plan.

Washington's State Department has begun to slip a sprightly written booklet into every passport it issues.

It warns the bearer of six "whoppers" the Communists will tell him.

These are that the Marshall plan aims at starting a war, colonising Europe to prevent an American economic collapse, imposing the American system on Europe, dumping American surplus goods on Europe and looting Western Europe of its strategic materials.

"Just plain lies," says the booklet. "Another warning is given that Communist 'malice and misinformation' will try to make the American feel guilty about the food and drink he takes, or the foreign goods he buys."

"Don't fall for that either," says the guide.

Tourists are also asked not to bring home false impressions based upon "the handsome meal" their European friends may serve them.

If will be done, says the booklet, "at a sacrifice to their diet for days or weeks to come."

MEDICINE: Officials of the American Medical Association, usually as reticent as Britain's General Medical Council, have begun in New York a "circuit" which is to tour the US to educate the public against the "circus" of Communist propaganda.

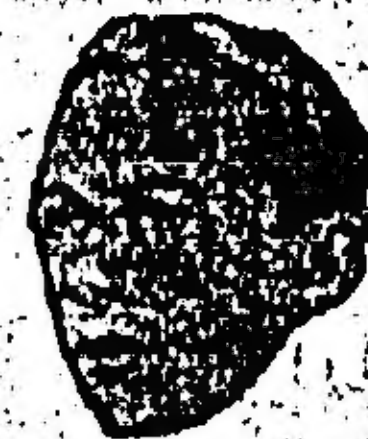

They are invited to ask any question they like of the 25 doctors who form the touring company.

EXAMPLE: Senator Charles McNary has been saying in many speeches, lately that the trouble with the world is that it sits back and waits for the US Government to bail it out.

Recently in his home town at Temple, New Hampshire, Senator McNary gave a practical demonstration of what he thinks the world ought to do instead. Although 69, he joined neighbours in a pick-and-shovel brigade to mend a half-mile of road the Government should have repaired. He said: "We are just helping ourselves as we always have."

FOOD: In a Broadway snack bar, the counter man, "Such eat-ers" as Paul Robeson have no business in locally as a toasted, English the theatre or on the radio."

Germ Bomb Gets First Try-Out

DETAILS of America's newest secret weapon—the germ bomb—have reached me from the bacterial warfare station at Camp Detrick, Maryland. They are the first facts on which the public can make an assessment of the weapon's power.

The bomb is a cluster of 4lb. canisters each containing an egg-cupful of concentrated germ culture. Dropped from a high-flying aircraft it cascades the canisters over the target. The canisters then explode separately a few feet above the ground.

Latest field trials, carried out in Utah, show that one-tenth of the germs survive the explosion and get scattered in the mist-form essential to produce results.

By counting the germs which settled on culture plates scattered over dummy target areas, U.S. Army bacteriologists have reported that four tons of the bombs would contaminate one square mile of battlefield. About half the troops there might be infected.

A four-ton bomb-load exploded over a town would contaminate an area about half a mile square, infecting perhaps 1,000 people.

Three other facts in my information reduce the operational scope of the weapon:—

1 Experiments have proved that germ-bombs are most unreliable. No field commander would dare plan an assault on the assumption that a target which had been germ-bombed must be sufficiently "softened."

2 Experiments aimed at producing epidemics to order have failed.

3 Effective antidotes to the germs which could be used in the bombs can be mass-produced. The big-scale manufacture of penicillin and other germ-killing drugs has already weakened the striking power of the new weapon.

US staff chiefs are convinced that only germs which do NOT start epidemics would be of strategic value in warfare. Highly infectious germs have been ruled out because of their boomerang effect on occupying troops.

In this light the germ-bomb remains a powerful deterrent to attack. But there is no scientific foundation for the claim that it is a super-weapon capable of deciding wars overnight.

SEEN THE BOSS?

TWO HOURS spent hunting ants with Edinburgh University scientist

W. R. G. MORLEY showed me why States are often compared with ant-hills.

By timing how long different ants take to learn the way through a miniature maze, Morley has proved that the initiative in any ant colony rests entirely with a few enterprising individuals.

Any new venture, such as a switch from nest-repairing to food-gathering, is always started by these "boss" ants, which in maze tests rarely make the same mistake twice.

The ant masses, which are usually too stupid to learn their way through a maze, follow the others slavishly.

When the bosses decide on a new move of population, the rest usually follow them. Any which seem unwilling to leave their old home are carried off by force.

ANYONE HOME?

have discovered that when swifts, migrating at 50-70 m.p.h. across Britain, pass over any site where other swifts have nested in previous years, they circle round, scream a few harsh notes, then fly on.

They will do this over nesting sites invisible from the air and before any of the locally "bred" birds, which will later occupy them, have arrived.

Question which the British Trust for Ornithology is trying to settle: Do the swifts somehow get to know and remember the exact locations of all these sites, or have they some "uncanny" sense for detecting them from the air?

HERE'S HOW

TO GET full enjoyment out of an aeroplane flight, passengers—but not pilots—should have a few drinks, ex-RAF specialist DR. KENNETH B. L. G. IN advises.

"Moderation in the use of alcohol promotes a sense of well-being, stimulates appetite, and allays apprehension," he writes in his first-rate Aviation Medicine (John Wright and Sons, 35s.).

And tests have shown that a few drinks can help to stave off air-sickness.

HOW THEY TICK

FOR RESEARCH on tropical medicine scientists have long needed a means of tracing the movements of individual mosquitoes in the field. Now they have it.

By feeding the larvae on a liquid previously bombarded with atomic rays, the scientists can rear radioactive mosquitoes to order. When released these can be tracked down by means of a sensitive instrument which picks up the rays they give off.

Former knowledge of the mosquitoes' flying habits will lead to new methods of keeping them in check.

NOW LUPULON

BREWERS know that a substance in hops called lupulon is a powerful antiseptic, being 200 times stronger than carbolic acid against germs which attack beer.

US doctors now report experiments with lupulon which suggest it may be useful in combating germs which attack people.

Germany's "Profound Faith" In Democracy

HEUSS ON "CHRISTIAN SPIRIT"

Bonn, Sept. 13.—Dr Theodor Heuss, the first President of the West German Federal Republic, said today that the German people honestly wished to become members of a European community and would be prepared to sacrifice sovereignty for this purpose.

He was replying to congratulations on his election from the three High Commissioners at a reception in Bad Godesberg.

M. Andre Franco-Poncet, the French High Commissioner who presented the congratulations on behalf of the High Commissioners, spoke of the historical significance of Dr Heuss's election.

Yemenite Protest To Britain

BOMBING OF FORT BY RAF

London, Sept. 13.—The British Embassy in Cairo has now reported to London on the Yemenite representations against the alleged Royal Air Force bombing of September 2 of a Yemenite fort. The protest was lodged last Saturday by Sheikh Mohamed Abdullah El Amari Waki, of the Yemenite delegation to the United Nations.

A Foreign Office spokesman said today that the Yemenite approach was now being considered, but there was nothing to bear out Press reports that the Yemenite Government intended to raise the matter in the Security Council.

Britain's case, it was understood, is that the fort, bombed after a warning by the RAF, had been constructed by Yemenite troops inside the frontiers of the British Protectorate of Aden.

The Foreign Office spokesman said that the clearing up of the incident was made more difficult by the failure so far to establish normal diplomatic relations between Britain and the Yemen.

He decided that when the Governor of Aden, Sir Reginald Campion, visited the new King of the Yemen, the Imam Ahmed, at his capital town of Sanaa last autumn, he was authorised to propose the establishment of normal diplomatic relations.

PROPOSAL REJECTED
This proposal was rejected by the Imam, who suggested that for the present the Governor of Aden should be considered Britain's diplomatic representative to the Yemen, but should reside in Aden.

Since in practice contact between Britain and the Yemen has been handled by the Governor of Aden this proposal was accepted by the British Government but was subsequently withdrawn by the Government of Yemen, the spokesman said.

The existing frontiers between the Yemen and the Aden Protectorate are established by the Treaty of Sanaa, which was concluded in 1934. This stated that the existing frontiers should be considered as provisional but should remain in force until permanent frontiers should be defined at some time during the 40 years' duration of the treaty.—Reuter.

EXCHANGE CLAIM

Firms' accounts were always subject to the scrutiny of the Economic Police, and in many instances the police had examined firms' books.

If the Police found a large sum entered they would want to know the reason for the payment, if the firm could explain why it would be in order, but if the firm could not explain it might possibly get into trouble, said witnesses.

Regarding the procedure on cheques, witnesses said that cheques would be sent to their office by their clients, and these cheques would be taken either by himself or by Mrs Edwards personally to the defendant's office before noon each day, because, noon was the settlement time for any particular business done that morning.

DOUBLE RECEIPTS
Witness said that he took cheques to Roberts' office two or three times a week and got a receipt from Baeten. The transactions were started in March 1947 and continued until early in 1948. A system of double receipts was started in September 1947, and before that he used to get single receipts.

The reason for the alteration was that there had been delays in some of the transactions being done and White decided to institute the double receipts system.

Witness added that White did most of the negotiating. Witness did some negotiating with Baeten, and very occasionally with Roberts, on foreign exchange.

The hearing is proceeding.

"For the first time after the terrible events of the past years, your country is taking shape again," he told Dr Heuss. "Its efforts and hopes are embodied in you, a man freely elected according to democratic rules, who is entitled by this fact both morally and legally to represent his nation."

"Be assured that you will find us ready at any time to facilitate in every way your high tasks."

Replying, the President spoke of Germany's "profound faith in a democracy based on a Christian spirit," adding: "It is the honest wish of the German people to become again a member of the great European community. For this purpose we are prepared to transfer sovereign rights to international institutions."

ADENAUER PREPARES

Meanwhile, Dr Konrad Adenauer, the Christian Democratic leader, was completing his negotiations for setting up his right-wing Coalition Cabinet.

The Bundestag (Lower House) will meet on Thursday to act on the President's proposal for the election of Dr Adenauer as Chancellor. Dr Adenauer, today called on the Socialist leader, Dr Kurt Schumacher for "an exchange of views."

Dr Adenauer described the meeting, which was on his initiative, as "fruitful for both sides."

Manstein's Order To Russians

Hamburg, Sept. 13.—German Army commanders conscripted young girls and pregnant mothers to bolster their defences against the Russians, the British military court trying Field Marshal Erich von Manstein was told today.

Mr Elwyn Jones, Member of Parliament, for the prosecution, accused the German Field Marshal of issuing orders, contrary to international conventions, for compulsory labour by Soviet citizens on military operations.

Russians were ordered to work on defences and other German Army projects, Mr Jones alleged. If they refused, the civilians were to be hanged. Mr Jones read an order issued by von Manstein saying: "Everything must be done in order to protect the present positions of the divisions against Russian tank and artillery attacks."

"I have observed that the Russian civilian population is not yet fully employed on this work. I therefore order that all civilians capable of work must be compelled to do at least 10 hours labour daily."

The court granted a defence application for two weeks' adjournment of the trial after the end of the prosecution's case.—Reuter.

Goodwill Visit To Canada

Sydney, Sept. 13.—The Lord Mayor of Sydney, Alderman E. C. O'Dea, will leave on Friday on a goodwill mission to Canada as the guest of the Canadian Pacific Airlines.

Alderman O'Dea told reporters that he would present a silk flag bearing the coat of arms of the city of Sydney to the Mayor of Vancouver.

He would also carry letters from the Prime Minister, Mr J. B. Chifley, and the New South Wales Premier, Mr James McGirr, to the Canadian Prime Minister, Mr Louis St. Laurent, and the Premier of British Columbia, Mr Byron Johnson.—Reuter.

The Airman Who Wouldn't Shave

Leuchars, Scotland, Sept. 13.—An airman told a court martial today he refused to shave because "the Lord Jesus Christ himself did not do so."

Associated Press.

Appointments in the West German Government are expected to include Dr Franz Blucher, the Free Democratic leader, as Vice-Chancellor with responsibility for the European Recovery Program, and Dr Anton Pfeiffer, a leading spokesman for the Bavarian Government, as State Secretary for International Relations.

The Ministry of Economics was expected to go to Professor Ludwig Erhard, the Christian Democratic Director of Economics in the Bizonal Administration, and the Finance post to a Bavarian representative, who will thus have an opportunity to prevent what Bavaria regards as excessive centralism in that important field.

The Free Democrats are expected to get the Ministries of Justice and Reconstruction and the German Party leader, Herr Heinrich Heilmann, to be a Minister without Portfolio charged with liaison with the Upper House representing the State Government.

The Transport Ministry is also likely to go to the Free Democrats.

The trade union wing of the Christian Democrats has been promised three posts—the Ministry of the Eastern Territories for the former East Zone Party leader, Herr Jakob Kaiser, and the two Ministries of Labour and Welfare.

There is also to be a special Ministry for Expellees, which, like the Ministry of the Interior, the Christian Democrats intend to retain.

The Bundestag will meet tomorrow to elect the Federal Chancellor. The Christian Democrats are in the majority and Dr Adenauer is their candidate for the Chancellorship.

An all-party Council of Elders, which meets tomorrow morning, has to fix the time of the sitting but the other parties are expected to agree to an evening meeting.

Dr Adenauer expects that if he is elected Chancellor, he will be able to present his Cabinet to another Bundestag meeting by Friday. If he is not ready by then, the Socialists will ask for a meeting on Friday to discuss the motions they have put forward.

One of the motions concerns dismantling and another asks for the transfer of the Federal capital from Bonn to Frankfurt.—Reuter.

Mr Fraser On Desire For Treaty

Wellington, Sept. 13.—The New Zealand Prime Minister, Mr Peter Fraser, said today that New Zealand would be "very pleased" if a peace treaty could be arranged with Japan, which was a country that required "careful watchfulness."

He was replying to an Opposition member in the House of Representatives, who said that there had been serious delay or inaction in the formation of a Pacific pact and further delay might mean the loss of democracy in the South Seas. Mr Fraser said everything possible was being done by the New Zealand Government, and no opportunity was being lost to push for a pact in quarters that mattered.

"Without the United States there can be no pact and no security so far as the democratic nations are concerned," he said.—Reuter.
